Monkeypox or Moneypox? WHO Director Overrules Panel, Declares Public Health Emergency

Contradicting the advice of an independent review panel, World Health Organization Director Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus on Saturday officially declared the monkeypox outbreak a Public Health Emergency of International Concern.

In a move that is sure to trigger widespread discussion concerning the independence, objectivity and wisdom of granting authority to the World Health Organization (WHO) to manage global infectious diseases responses, the monkeypox outbreak has been declared a Public Health Emergency of International Concern (PHEIC) by WHO.

The declaration was made unilaterally, in direct contradiction to independent review panel advice, by WHO Director Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus.

Tedros made the declaration despite a lack of consensus among members of the WHO's emergency committee on the monkeypox outbreak, and in so doing overruled his own review panel, who had voted 9 against and 6 for declaring the PHEIC.

Tedros asserted that this committee of experts, who met last week, was unable to reach a consensus, so it fell on him to decide whether to trigger the highest alert possible. Any objective outside observer would conclude that the committee failed to endorse moving to a PHEIC.

When a similar meeting was previously held on June 23, the committee resolved by consensus to advise the WHO director-general that at this stage the outbreak should be determined to not constitute a PHEIC.

An official United Nations article summarizing this can be found here. When the group met in June, the breakdown was 11 against and 3 for.

It is not clear what has changed in the intervening four weeks to justify the change in Tedros' position, although comments from internet pundits (see below) raise concerns that the unilateral action was taken in response to pressure from special interest advocacy groups.

There has also been a sudden burst of coordinated social media posts raising concerns regarding monkeypox risks to children, which raises the question "if monkeypox is a sexually transmitted disease, why are kids getting it?"

Am I the only parent reading about #monkeypox and starting to worry it'll be all over elementary schools this fall? It is not an STD, reads more like Hand, Foot, and Mouth.

I'm not a public health official, but seems real weird it's currently painted as an LGBTQ+ issue.

Last week, the U.S. confirmed the first two cases of monkeypox in children, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) Director Rochelle Walensky said.

The CDC has said children, especially those under 8 years old, are among those at "especially increased risk" for severe monkeypox disease.

At a virtual event with the Washington Post on Friday focused on new coronavirus variants, Walensky stated:

> "Both of those children are traced back to individuals who come from the men-who-have-sex-with-men community, the gay men's community."

Clearly, the WHO committee did not reach the desired decision to declare a PHEIC, and so for some extraordinary reason, Tedros stepped in.

Though the committee does not formally vote, a survey of the members revealed that nine thought a PHEIC should not be declared and six supported a declaration.

Tedros said in a news conference called to announce the decision:

> "Nine and six is very, very close. Since the role of the committee is to advise, I then had to act as a tie-breaker."

Tedros made the declaration despite a lack of consensus among members of the WHO's emergency committee on the monkeypox outbreak. It's the first time a leader of a United Nations health agency has made such a decision unilaterally.

In the event of a deadly disease outbreak, a group of WHO experts can declare a PHEIC to trigger global action.

Since the procedures to declare a PHEIC was implemented in 2005, the WHO has only done so six times. The last time the WHO declared an international emergency was in early 2020 for COVID-19.

The designation of a PHEIC is the WHO's highest alert level. It is based on international health regulations established in 2005, to define countries' rights and obligations in handling cross-border public health occurrences.

The WHO defines a PHEIC as "an extraordinary event which is determined to constitute a public health risk to other states through the international spread of disease and to potentially require a coordinated international response."

The WHO further explains how this definition implies a situation that is serious, sudden, unusual or unexpected; carries implications for public health beyond an affected country's border and may require immediate international action.

Tedros' statements clearly demonstrate that he unilaterally substituted his own opinions for those of the convened panel, raising questions about his objectivity, commitment to process and protocol, and whether he has been unduly influenced by external agents.

Tedros stated:

> "I have decided that the global monkeypox outbreak represents a public health emergency of international concern.
>
> "WHO's assessment is that the risk of monkeypox is moderate globally and in all regions, except in the European region where we assess the risk as high.
> "We have an outbreak that has spread around the world rapidly through new modes of transmission about which we understand too little and which meets the criteria in the international health regulations.
>
> "I know this has not been an easy or straightforward process and that there are divergent views among the members" of the committee.
>
> "Although I am declaring a public health emergency of international concern, for the moment this is an outbreak that is concentrated among men who have sex with men, especially those with multiple sexual partners. That means that this is an outbreak that can be stopped with the right strategies in the right groups."

As the outbreak continues to grow, epidemiologists are split as to whether the WHO's decision was correct. The meeting was the second time the emergency committee convened, after a meeting on June 23 when it decided the outbreak had not met that threshold.

Dr. Jimmy Whitworth, a professor of international public health at the London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine, stated:

> "It is a tricky decision for the committee, in some senses, it meets the definition — it is an unprecedented outbreak widespread in many countries and would benefit from increased international coordination.
> "On the other hand, it seems to be an infection for which we have the necessary tools for control; most cases are mild and the mortality rate is extremely low."

The PHEIC designation comes from the International Health Regulations (IHR) created in 2005, and it represents an international "agreement" to help prevent and respond to public health risks that have the potential to spread around the globe.

The CDC describes the IHR regulations as:

> "A legally binding agreement of 196 countries to build the capability to detect and report potential public health emergencies worldwide. IHR requires that all countries have the ability to detect, assess, report, and respond to public health events."

These are the same IHR the Biden administration sought to further strengthen, but the attempt to implement proposed modifications was placed on hold after an international, multi-country outcry concerning the loss of national autonomy. The unilateral actions of Tedros in this current situation clearly demonstrate that these concerns were warranted.

Despite the statement by the CDC, the WHO IHR is not a treaty that has been endorsed by the U.S. Senate, and the assertion that these are legally binding has been challenged.

In an article supportive of the declaration, Vox provided a summary of the potential financial beneficiaries of this declaration; that being vaccine manufacturers and the holding companies who have invested in them.

Vox wrote:

> The emergency ought to get countries to share vaccines. But it's not guaranteed.
>
> Vaccination plays a key role in controlling monkeypox transmission during an outbreak, and crucially, these vaccines already exist.
>
> The COVID-19 pandemic taught the world some painful lessons about the importance of global coordination to ensure fast and equitable vaccine distribution. The PHEIC alarm bell hopefully will spur action so the same mistakes are not repeated.
>
> A major reason global health experts have been anxious over the timeliness of a WHO emergency declaration for monkeypox is the declaration's potential to get vaccines to the most vulnerable groups quickly.
>
> Vaccines do exist to prevent monkeypox, and while many countries have a quantity of these vaccines on hand as part of their national stockpiles, U.S. demand has greatly outpaced supply, and the global supply of vaccines is relatively small.
>
> Countries have been scrambling to order more vaccines, and while the producer of the most popular monkeypox vaccine has not disclosed which countries have put down orders, the nations that have announced vaccine purchases have generally been higher-income ones, like Germany, Britain and Canada.
>
> That portends a pattern of vaccine inequity that unfolded to tragic effect during the COVID-19 vaccine rollout, with poorer countries struggling to acquire vaccines and cut off from vaccine production efforts.
>
> In his announcement of the WHO's Emergency Committee's plan to convene in June, WHO Europe Director Hans Kluge said following a more equitable blueprint for monkeypox vaccine distribution would be a key step in controlling the outbreak.
>
> "A 'me first' approach could lead to damaging consequences down the road if we do not employ a genuinely collaborative and far-thinking approach," Kluge said. "I beseech governments to tackle monkeypox without repeating the mistakes of the pandemic — and keeping equity at the heart of all we do."
>
> When the WHO declares an emergency, it also makes recommendations to affected countries, which often relate to vaccination strategies. This spurs countries to coordinate vaccine strategies to increase vaccine supply in less wealthy countries.
>
> It can also spur donors to fund vaccination efforts that prioritize equitable access to vaccines. However, the WHO's recommendations in the face of an emergency are ultimately just recommendations.
>
> "There's no way to enforce that globally," Heymann said.
>
> The ACT Accelerator, a collaboration to raise funds to distribute COVID-19 tests, therapies and vaccines to low-resource countries, was an attempt at an equitable solution in the pandemic.
>
> However, in the eyes of many, it did not succeed. Public health experts are hopeful earlier action on monkeypox could avoid some of the ACT Accelerator's pitfalls.
> In its announcement today, WHO representatives said it was encouraging countries with large vaccine stockpiles to share and donate vaccines to other countries that do not currently have access to vaccines.

Let's cut to the chase: the WHO is run in the service of the Gates Foundation and Big Pharma. It is a corrupt institution. That is what we should conclude from the WHO's announcement. There's no epidemic or pandemic; just another PCR test fraud. The PHEIC announcement is designed to boost the profits of the "vaccine" makers and inject you with substances that will - not make you well - but enslave you to Big Pharma and the biosecurity state control grid.

The Who is basically run by Gates! He says jump and they say how high! This is nothing more than another money grab and fear mongering. Sell more vaccines to make billions and kill off the population with the poison. I want to see the kids tests that at 8 years old have a sexually transmitted disease! If they do have it then someone should be going to jail for child molestation. This crap needs to stop! The Who needs to be shut down or at least have no say in what our country does. We are all sick and tired of this bull! Someone needs to put a stop to Bill Gates and friends!!!

Actually, it is a little bit more involved if you go by the transgender ideology. It is possible for a man to have sex with a man who is not gay.

Tedros are taking orders from Gates. Comes from the Nuclear Threat Initiative of the Monkeypox being the next scamdemic that sells more $$ depopulation shots that cause infections, injuries, and deaths. The real Monkeypox is a gay disease and those screwing with each other. It's what God warned us not to do, as to why God destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah. Big $$ for depopulation and control agenda. Why natural immunity is far superior than Pharmakeia immunity. Even Scarf lady Birx admitted that the clot shots don't protect against infection. Sunlight is the best disinfectant.
For those running for their shots believing that this will protect them against the Convids to Monkeypox, is a branch vax cult. Talk about mass psychosis and cognitive dissonance at it's finest.

Dr. Malone is none other than a proponent of germ theory which is 100% fake--terrain theory is correct. For example, all pox is simply the body detoxing itself by removing poisons. Skin lesions may result since the last filter is the skin itself as toxins pass through and out.

Vaccines are a prime cause of skin pox and the flu shot is a direct cause of pox or skin lesions--it is listed on the Pfizer trial data too.

As for the gay men approach the criminals use: Remember HIV AIDS? Aids was the loss of the immune system then when gay men used amyl nitrate poppers every day--well known to wipe out the immune system.

So after the HIV fake PCR test, those they told had "HIV" were eventually offered AZT; a chemo repurposed drug that killed millions. This was Fauci's plan to eliminate gay men and black people in Africa--eugenics.

This may be happening again with mRNA deadly vaccines, MP, and gay men.
3 ^ | v • Reply • Share ›

Tina → stevebilliter • 6 hours ago
And your degree is in____________? HIV has never been proven to be caused by homosexual activity. In fact, the syndrome which includes skin lesions, tumors, pneumonia, and wasting to name a few, is seen in many conditions having nothing to do with gay sex. "AIDS" has been around several thousand years. It was Fauci who tied it to gay sex

Dr. Malone is a well known authority on vaccines and created the mRNA technology and has patents to prove it. He did not create the vaccine, which many people get confused with.

And, oh yes, my degree is in medicine.

Dr. Malone is in support of vaccines. Now the Defender needs to find a doctor who supports natural healing to get a different perspective. Vaccines are not always the answer, especially when you consider the new technology that is being incorporated in them.

I've worked in the health care industry long enough to know that there are effective treatments for the majority of illnesses which do not involve vaccination.

Big Pharma has never cared about cures. It's all about treatments; because, there is more of a profit in treatment than in cure.

Tedros said that 9 and 6 are very close. Not as close as 8 and 7. If the vote had been that kind of split, I'd understand why he would want to act as tie-breaker. Doesn't make it right or a good thing. Tedros isn't even a medical doctor. Who put him into that position, anyway? Also, where does the WHO get most of its funding?

Dr. Malone is in agreement with some vaccines. Totally opposed to the Covid 19 vaccine for kids and very much against it for adults, except in certain situations. That was the last I recall of his position which may have changed to “no Covid 19 vaccine period”, for all I know. He does support Vitamin D and other alternative approaches which are actually very good.

Big Pharma is definitely the enemy.

The story of "THE VIRUS" is ABSOLUTELY PARAMOUNT to confront directly and not "move past" or else we are never going to solve anything. In fact, unless we address ROOT CAUSES, then we will be battling endless FAKE pandemics and FAKE "countermeasures" FOREVER.
